Bay school district students may be shifted to county

By DENA BISNETTE

The Hancock County School Board expanded its agenda Saturday to include discussions on a possible district change for about 100 students and a computer teaching program.

Research by School Superintendent Terry Randolph has shown that the students, who currently live in Waveland and attend Bay St. Louis Separate Municipal School District schools, are actually supposed to attend Hancock County Schools.

The situation exists because changes in city boundaries do not affect school district lines unless affected school boards approve also changing them. According to Randolph, the city of Waveland annexed the area where the students live about 12 years ago but no change was made in the school district lines.

It has not been determined whether the students will begin attending Hancock County Schools or whether the district lines will change. The Hancock County School Board plans no further action until more information about the situation can be obtained.

Randolph said the Bay St. Louis School District is working on a more accurate count of the students by making a list of their names, addresses and ages. The list is expected to be turned over to the Hancock board next month.

The board also discussed the possibility of setting up a computer teaching program in county elementary schools.

"We're searching for a program that would be best for our school system in so far as supplementing the regular education program, especially remedial programs like reading and math," Randolph said.

Randolph and some of the other board members scheduled a visit to a Lafayette, La., school district where computers are being used in elementary schools for Chapter One, a federally-funded program offering remedial reading and math to educationally disadvantaged students.

"The children work independently of the teacher," explained Randolph, who has previously seen the Lafayette system. "They have an immediate course design for each child. It has eight levels in an elevated step process for the child to complete."

If the board decides to obtain a computer teaching system similar to the one in Lafayette for Hancock County, installation could be completed in time for the September school term. Randolph said the system could cost $75,000 to $80,000 but added that federal funds would be used to pay for it.

In other business, the board heard a report on the school lunch program from School Food Service Supervisor Rhea Scalfidi.

She reported on the progress of the program as well as giving recommendations on the purchase of two pieces of kitchen equipment for Gulfview School. The board accepted a combined bid of $8,600 on the equipment, a fryer and a

Costs estimated on jail options

By NAN PATTON EHRBRIGHT

A report to the Hancock County Board of Supervisors by Architect Fred Wagner gives cost comparisons on alternative proposals for a new jail, but excludes land acquisition costs.

"That's outside my purview," Wagner told the supervisors Monday.

The supervisors, unanimous in their conviction it is essential to construct a new jail in Hancock County, also feel additional space is needed at the county courthouse.

They are currently considering three options:

- Construction of a new jail and expansion of the courthouse at its present location;
- Building a new jail and a new courthouse at a new location; or
- Building a new complex to house a jail, a county courthouse and city offices for Bay St. Louis and Waveland.

OPTION ONE

Wagner's plans for a new jail and sheriff's office containing a total of 20,000 square feet put the total cost at $2,500,000.

He proposes adding two-story wings on each side of the existing courthouse, 30 by 100 feet each, to provide an additional 12,000 square feet.

The wings, Wagner said, can be built in stages as needed at $120 per square foot, including building and other budget costs.

Future land purchases can be handled as they can be afforded, he said.

"If you stay in this location you will have to acquire additional land," he said.

"You need about five acres just for the courthouse complex, whether it's here or somewhere else, to provide space on a long-range basis and provide adequate parking.

Potential additional properties, he said, include the Sea Coast Echo property, Main Street Methodist Church and Cue Street, and property at the southeast corner of Court and Second Streets.

Wagner said Sea Coast Echo owners have expressed a specific intent not to sell their property at this time.

"I believe the Methodist Church would be agreeable at this time to entering into serious discussions to consider selling that property if they can remove their historic sanctuary building."

The church's education building, he said, contains 4,800 square feet, most of which could be used for certain public office functions.

Waveland to enforce home beautification

By NAN PATTON EHRBRIGHT

New homes in Waveland will have to comply with a city ordinance adopted in April of 1974 but until now not generally enforced, Waveland aldermen agreed Wednesday evening.

Ordinance No. 82 requires that all houses elevated to a height in excess of six feet from the bottom shell to the surface of the ground have 50 percent of the bottom portion thereof enclosed with wooden, wire, aluminum or metal lattice-work or screen.

Mayor John Longo said the ordinance would affect homes under construction, but no effort would be made to enforce the ordinance for homes already in place.

"But I would hope those who don't have anything will put up some lattice-work," he added.

"It would be a personal gain for homeowners in addition to a community gain."

The ordinance was passed for aesthetic enhancement of neighborhoods.

Longo also said the ordinance regarding abandoned junk cars is going to be strictly enforced.

"We've had numerous complaints about junked cars," he said, "and the police department will be going to be notified to take action."

Also Wednesday, the aldermen discussed plans for Waveland's summer recreational program to be coordinated by Bonnie Logan with Rita Krupp in charge of the tennis program. Activities will include softball, volleyball, tennis and other games.

The program will operate Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Persons who would like free souvenirs of the Gulf Coast's World's Fair train may pick them up at Waveland City Hall.

Eagle's visit to World's Fair revives memories for sailor

By NAN PATTON EHRBRIGHT

The Louisiana World Exposition is expected to bring thousands of visitors to the South who will take home with them, fair planners hope, memories that will last a long time.

For Peter C. Fucetta of 488 Urban Ave. in Bay St. Louis, memories of his experiences here, being trained with one of the exposition's exhibits, will be a reminder of a time when he was a sailor.

The U.S. Coast Guard cutter, Eagle, is currently on display at the fair.

The ship had a German engine then," he said.

The first cutter Eagle was commissioned in 1792, just two years after formation of the Revenue Marine, forerunner of today's Coast Guard.

The second Eagle fought French privateers in the Caribbean.

The crew of Eagle three held off the British at the battle of Negro Head during the War of 1812.

Electricity fed to Louisiana

Resident claims power line 'sizzles'

By DENA BISNETTE

Mississippi Power Company's new 500 kilovolt transmission line started commercial operations Thursday with a sizzling sound that surprised at least one Hancock County resident.

"It sounds like steaks sizzling," said the anonymous resident. "I'll tell you one thing, I'm scared of it."

The noise won't disappear, according to Mississippi Power spokesman John Hutchinson, but should subside to a low hum within a few days. "Sometimes the wire cable will have a burr, a rough spot, on it," Hutchinson explained. "In a few days those burrs will burn off, which should reduce the noise somewhat."

He added that noise was a primary concern when Mississippi Power went to the Public Service Commission and Hinds County Chancery Court in 1982 for permission to build the line. However, hearings indicated that numerous studies had shown the noise routinely made by high transmission power lines does not pose a health hazard.

The resident who described the noise says he does not know how long it will continue and is worried about its effects on his family. The line is only 140 feet away from his residence and can be heard from indoors as well as from anywhere on his twelve acres of land.

"My son heard it first. He was playing out here on the other side of the yard, and I guess they turned it on just to test it. He started screaming that the power line was on and he could hear it."

He said it sounded like little firecrackers.

The resident said his son, who is six, will no longer walk under the power line. He is reluctant to walk under it himself. "I was going to plant a garden, but I don't want to plant under it," he said, looking at ground he broke before the line was turned on. "I just don't want to walk under it with it sizzling like that."

He claims fear of the power line has affected his neighbors and friends. Two friends who were frequent visitors to his house said they no longer want to go there since the line is on, and two neighbors in close proximity to the line avoid it.

"It's scary, knowing there's enough power up there to fry a city," he said, explaining that he realizes the electricity from the line will benefit many people. But adding, that knowing it does not make him less apprehensive about having the line in his yard.

One neighbor, the resident reported, was so worried about the power line

Police nab suspects after hiker robbery

By ELLIS CUEVAS

Two persons were arrested Saturday morning and charged with grand larceny in a joint investigation conducted by Bay police, Hancock sheriff's office, and the Mississippi Highway Patrol, according to Alvin Ladner, Hancock County investigator.

Ladner said, James D. Deaton, 49, and Theresa Campbell, 25, both a resident of a mobile home in Pearlington were arrested and charged with alleged grand larceny in connection with a hiker who was offered a ride in Slidell, and then had his possessions taken.

Detective Joe Pica, Bay police department reported, "The duo had been under surveillance by my department and the sheriff's office since April 20 when they reportedly offered a ride to a Tennessee National Guardsman who was near a Biloxi lounge, and they let him out at the Washington Street Pier in Bay St. Louis, then took his belongings."

"We also received a similar complaint from another person about a month prior to this one," Pica stated.

Ladner said, "Early Saturday, a hiker was offered a ride by the duo in Slidell and when they stopped at the Hospitality Station on I-10 and he got out, they took off with his belongings."

"A description of the duo and van was similar to the one given by the Tennessee National Guardsman, and they were arrested at a mobile home on US-90 in Pearlington by law officers," Pica continued.

A search warrant was secured from Horatio Frierson, Justice Court Judge for the mobile home and van. Ladner said.

During the search some of the belongings of the National Guardsman were found, Pica said.

Late Saturday Ladner stated bond was set at $50,000 for Campbell.

"Bond had not been set for Deaton because he has apparently used several aliases and we are still checking his background," Ladner said late Saturday.

Ladner reported three weapons, some pills which are going to be checked by the Mississippi Crime Lab, in addition to the belongings of the victims were found during the search, and there is a possibility of other victims may be brought against the suspects.

Officers involved in the investigation include: Detective Joe Pica, Bay police Eagle's four and Eagle five operated out of New Haven, Conn., and then, nearly 100 years passed before the advent of the U.S. Coast Guard's 100-foot patrol boat, Eagle, which was built in 1923.

The ship was built in 1923 and was the first of a class of 100-foot patrol boats built for the U.S. Coast Guard.

Sign-up deadline announced for military health care plan

Starting this summer the Civilian Health and Medical Program for the Uniformed Services, CHAMPUS, will not pay claims for anyone not listed in the Department of Defense computer system called DEERS.

CHAMPUS is a cost-sharing health plan for active-duty and retired military members and their families and survivors.

Officials of CHAMPUS are urging members to get enrolled before the DEERS deadlines are phased in.

Active duty members and retirees are automatically listed in DEERS but dependents must be enrolled by their sponsors.

CHAMPUS claims submitted for people not enrolled in DEERS will be denied after the deadlines. Denied claims can be resubmitted once a member is listed in the DEERS, officials said.

The new policy will be phased in throughout the United States by regions.

What should well dressed pesticide applicator wear?

By Beth Duncan
Clothing Specialist
Extension Service

We live in an age of concerns about chemical carcinogens.

Since most pesticides contain chemicals that are extremely dangerous and toxic for human beings, many people want to know about the type of clothing to wear when applying pesticides.

Protective clothing should be worn to protect the person who is applying the chemical. Pesticides can do harm in three ways, by direct ingestion, absorption through the skin or by inhaling.

Clothing for chemical application should be clean and dry. Check carefully for any tears and holes.

It is important that all skin areas be covered since pesticide coming in contact with the skin is a major hazard. Protective clothing includes the following:

- long sleeved shirt and pants or coveralls
- gloves
- boots
- hat
- respirator

The fabric of the shirt and pants should be firmly woven. The shirt should have long sleeves and a collar that fits snugly when buttoned. Tuck the shirt into the pants. The pants should be worn outside the boots and shirt sleeves outside the gloves.

Coveralls should have long sleeves and a collar that fits snugly when buttoned. Sleeves should be worn outside the gloves and legs should be worn outside the boots.

Use rubber gloves that reach at least half-way to the elbow. Be sure that they are free from holes or tears. Select gloves that can be washed inside and out. Wash and dry them after each use.

Boots should reach at least half-way to the knee. Select rubber or plastic ones. Rinse boots after each use and wear them only when using pesticides.

A respirator is needed when using certain chemicals. Remember to change the cartridge as recommended.

Clothing worn during the application of pesticides should be laundered after each wearing. Residue from drift or spills may contaminate clothing during the application of pesticides. Contaminated clothing may pose a hazard to you and your family.

After using pesticides, remove all clothing. Immediately place in a plastic container (bag with a tie close ing or bucket with a lid) until you are ready to launder them.

Contaminated clothing should not be added to other laundry. It is important to wash them separately so the pesticide residue will not redeposit on other garments.

Always check the pesticide label and garment label for specific laundering and handling instructions.

To launder contaminated clothing use: normal or full load water level depending on number of clothing items, recommended amount of heavy-duty phosphate based detergent, and longer washing time as for heavily soiled garments. Remember, do not overload your washing machine.

After removing the garments from the washing machine, clean the machine by running a complete cycle using detergent. For added protection, wipe down the tub using isopropyl alcohol.

Thoroughly dry the garments in the dryer at the regular fabric setting.

Mississippi GOP launches ad campaign

Republican Party Chairman Ebbie Spivey recently announced the State GOP has begun a major advertising campaign to encourage Mississippians to register to vote in this fall's election.

Sprivey said television and radio spots, scheduled to air in Mississippi from May 21 through May 27, will point out the improvement in the economy since the present Republican Administration took office in 1980 and will stress the importance of voting Republican this year. "The people of Mississippi know we are better off now than we were four years ago," noted Spivey. "We simply can't afford to return to the problems and failed policies of Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale."

"I hope all conservative minded people will register immediately so that they can make their voices heard this fall," she said.

"Our advertising effort represents only the first step in our voter registration drive for 1984. We believe the message conveyed by these ads is the message on the minds of Mississippians."

North Bay students raise $630 reading

By NAN P. EHRBRIGHT
Fifty-four students from North Bay Elementary School in Bay St. Louis participated in the recent March of Dimes Reading Champions Program.

The 54 youngsters read a total of 1,126 books and raised a total of $631 for the March of Dimes.

KISSY BELL
Kissy Bell, a member of Linda Turner's fifth grade class, won the overall award for reading 56 books.

Turner's home room class, which read a total of 250 books, was presented with a plaque for being the class reporting the greatest number of books read during the 30-day period.

Participating students reading up to nine books during the program received Olympic-type bronze medals. Students reading ten to 19 books received silver medals, and students reading 20 books or more earned gold medals.

The reading program, sponsored annually by the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation, has three goals:

—To increase children's enjoyment of reading books for pleasure;

—To acquaint youngsters with the tragedy of birth defects; and —To give children an opportunity to help others by raising money for the March of Dimes.

The participants were allowed to read any book other than a textbook or a comic book.

Friends, family and neighbors were asked to make a pledge of any amount of money for each book a student read.

Q: We needed to have some work done on a car. To pay for it, we traded the mechanic two old cars that were not running. The mechanic never came to get the two old cars and now three years have gone by and we have the chance to sell them. Can we?

A: Yes, your agreement to give the mechanic two old cars in exchange for performing repairs to another vehicle constituted an oral contract. In the State of Mississippi a suit to enforce an unwritten contract, expressed or implied, must be commenced within three years after the cause of action accrues.

Because the mechanic has allowed three years to pass since your offer to give him the cars in exchange for his services, he has no legal right to the vehicle.

Q: My mother is 92 years old and has owned her 160 acre farm for many years. It is fully paid for and my dad died years ago. Mother wants to sell the farm and has found a buyer. She only went to school through the third grade and cannot write her name. I understand she can give the buyer a deed and sign in with an "X". Is this true, and what does the law require in this regard?

A: Assuming that title to the farm is held solely by your mother and that her mental condition is sound, she can sell the property and sign the deed to the buyer with her mark.

The deed should be signed in the presence of two witnesses to her mark and should carry the acknowledgment of a Notary Public, and after acknowledging authority that the deed has, in fact, been signed, sealed and delivered by your mother.

Existing "courthouse" areas include the courthouse, jail, sheriff's office, youth court, welfare office and county agent.

In addition, Wagner noted, the tax assessor is using portions of the County Home for reappraisal offices.

The county health department was not included as part of the courthouse complex in Wagner's presentation.

The primary advantage of staying in this location is that you can build facilities in phases, Wagner noted.

The present building could be kept for court functions, with some renovation, and new buildings could be used for the board of supervisors and other county offices, he said.

OPTION TWO

"The advantage of going to a remote location," Wagner said, "is all new facilities where you can really accommodate the public and public employees in an efficient facility."

Wagner estimated costs for a new jail and courthouse at $2,500,000 for the jail/sheriff's office and $4,500,000 for a courthouse containing 50,000 square feet.

Approximately five acres of land would be needed, he estimated. Parkland space is estimated at 200,000 square feet.

would be needed.

"Each city would need approximately five acres, depending on the facilities they intend to include—fire station, police departments, etc.," Wagner said.

The cost figures for all three options, he noted, are rough budget figures and include estimated costs for construction, site development, parking and driveways, walks and landscaping, professional fees and some furniture.

PUBLIC INPUT

Monday the supervisors agreed to ask Hancock County residents through media surveys, which of the three options they prefer.

A WLOX-TV survey conducted earlier this week showed 57.2 percent favoring a new jail and courthouse, 32.6 percent favoring a new jail and additions to the present courthouse and 30.2 percent favoring a new complex to include Bay St. Louis and Waveland city halls.

But News Director Dave Vincent said participation was limited and "I don't think that poll would mean a lot."

He declined to say exactly how many people participated, but said, "I had a lot of people call, noting that improvements in the courthouse is more complicated than improvements in the jail."

EDITORIAL

County-wide sewerage is needed in Hancock

Pollution continues to be an issue in Hancock County, just as it is in the majority of counties throughout the nation.

Recent reports made before public officials about open sewerage being dumped into our rivers, canals, and bayous should have all citizens concerned.

If our waters are to be cleaned, this has to be stopped. The lack of a central sewer system in Hancock County has delayed the construction of many homes because of potential owners not being able to secure loans.

It is against the policy of governmental lending agencies and private institutions acting as agents for government funds to make home loans in areas where sewerage is not available.

We realize a central sewer system would be expensive, yet it would mean so much to Hancock County's growth.

We are hoping an all-out effort will be put forth by all political leaders, as well as residents to have a central sewer system in Hancock County especially South of I-10 for a start.

The longer the project is delayed, the more it is going to cost and as you know, prices continue to increase especially in construction.

The majority of Bay St. Louis and Waveland homeowners have sewerage, and a few subdivisions such as Diamondhead and Jourdan River Shores.

This leaves a tremendous number of residents without proper sewerage disposal.

One can remember the ditches of Bay St. Louis and Waveland always having water in them before sewerage was installed. Since then the water leaves the majority of ditches when there is no rain.

This goes to demonstrate just where a lot of that water was entering the drainage ditches from.

Our population is growing and more governmental services are needed for its continued growth.

Quotables by CUEVAS

The Hancock County Board of Supervisors are interested in the opinions of residents on a new county jail.

As you know the county is in need of a new jail, as the old one is completely outdated.

We have a survey appearing on Page 3-A of this issue, and we hope you will respond.

The Hancock County Chamber of Commerce's Morning Edition will have an extra special guest on Thursday.

Winston Lill, community relations manager for the Louisiana World Exposition is the scheduled speaker.

The event will take place at the Rose's Cafe, next to the post office on Coleman Avenue at 7:30 a.m.

As you know the World's Fair has been open for several days now and Lill should have some interesting comments.

Mason's Exxon is the sponsor for the Morning Edition.

'Gun Control people would ban all guns and hunting if they had the chance'

May 17, 1984

Dear Editor:

In your May 17 edition you published a letter concerning armor-piercing or 'cop killer' bullets and handgun control, Inc.

First I would like to state that I am a member of NRA and an avid hunter. I use both sidearms and rifles or shotguns during hunting seasons and for recreational shooting.

The letter you published talked about a bill introduced to ban these armor-piercing bullets. Is that all there is to it? If such a bill is passed, what's to stop criminals from loading their own bullets? You can buy literally hundreds of handloaders on the market today. If a criminal wants these bullets, it wouldn't be hard to make them.

Seriously, this is more than just an attempt to ban bullets. The gun control people would ban all guns and hunting if they had the chance.

These are the same people who would let south Florida deer starve to death rather than be killed by hunters. Any victory to hand gun control would be a serious blow to all hunters. Think about it.

I don't condone any type of violent crime, but I do want my children to enjoy the rights and freedoms I enjoyed as a child. This is my own personal opinion.

Sincerely,
Chuck Kinsey

Dear Editor,

I submit it for publication.

Congressman Trent Lott
House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Representative Lott,

I would like to respond to your article printed in The Sea Coast Echo Sunday, May 13. It seems that the White House briefing you attended followed the simple consistent logic of the Administration which is, mutatis mutandis, applied indiscriminately to any Latin American country or other developing nation. It goes briefly as follows:

1) Wherever there is conflict in a developing nation (e.g., El Salvador) which "diminishes" (translate: threatens) democracy (translate: U.S. business interests) it is caused by communists (i.e., the Soviet-Cuba block, subversives, Marxists-Leninists, etc.).

2) Since we are powerful, the only solution is military aid to "wipe out the Communist threat" and "secure the world for democracy."

3) To prove to people back home that it is "democracy" (and not just U.S. business interests) that is at stake, the most convincing visible evidence for democracy are "free elections," whether there is any real participation of the people in their influence over their political, economic, and social reality or not.

Also, I hope they enforce the law against glass containers brought on the beach as I have seen several people cut.

Thank you,
Lynn Paul Rattiff

I would like to suggest another 'briefing':

1) Conflict occurs in a developing country (like El Salvador) when there are massive injustices and inequity in the socio-economic structure: i.e., the great majority of the people receive very little of the fruits of their labor, while land and wealth are concentrated in the hands of the few (e.g., the '4 families' of El Salvador and the Somoza family of Nicaragua).

2) This structure is partially maintained and protected by U.S. foreign policy because it serves 'stability' maintained by repression and continued economic advantage for the U.S.

3) Anything that promises to change this social structure must be seen as a communist infiltration or threat.

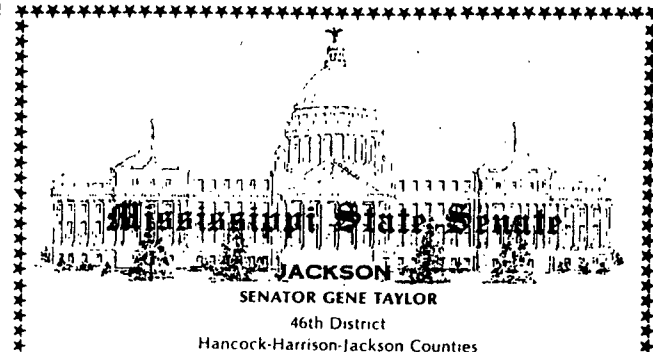

4) When nothing else works, some Latin Americans will even adopt a Marxist way of thinking because it at least recognizes that there must be a change in the social structure for the people to participate in the goods they are producing.

5) Until a social transformation takes place that brings the people to actually participate in the political process and share in the wealth and productivity of their country, social unrest will continue and repressive measures will have to be tightened to prevent change.

"Free elections" orchestrated from outside do not guarantee real participation in government by the people, no matter how symbolic they may be of "democracy," even though in a democracy, free elections are assumed.

All ask you to consider the alternative briefing. And as you're a Christian, I remember also that Christ's teaching brings in loss of production. Consider how much the U.S. dollar spent on banana goods, the family of the man who wrote them.

Thank you for your consideration.

SENATOR GENE TAYLOR

46th District

Hancock-Harrison-Jackson Counties

LEGISLATIVE REPORT

During the last weeks of the 1984 Regular Legislative Session, over 200 conference committees met to work out compromises for bills on which the Senate and the House of Representatives were unable to agree.

Each conference committee was composed of three senators and three representatives.

I am very pleased that two bills which I authored were adopted by conference committees and both bills have been accepted by the Senate and the House.

One dealt with elimination of dual registration for voting and the other dealt with seafood licenses. All that remains for the bills to be adopted into law is signature by the Governor. The voter registration bill must also be approved by the federal Justice Department under the requirements of the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

The voter registration bill eliminates the requirement that citizens register at city hall to be eligible to vote in municipal elections and at the county courthouse to be eligible to vote in all other elections.

When the law becomes effective, citizens may go to either city hall or the county courthouse to register to vote.

Also, the regular polling place in a precinct can be used for voter registration at designated times with notice to be given in the local newspaper and with the approval of the county board of supervisors.

My intent in this bill is to make voter registration as convenient as possible for all citizens, especially those who have not registered because of long work days or great distances between their home and the county courthouse.

Under the new law, if a voter registers at the county courthouse, the county will notify the city to put that person on the city voting rolls and vice versa if a person registers at city hall.

The other bill amends the law dealing with seafood licenses. It was introduced with the intent of limiting the number of out of state commercial fishing vessels in our state's already overburdened coastal waters.

Beginning in 1985 all commercial licenses that relate to the taking of seafood shall be purchased from January 1 through March 31 of each year and expire on April 30 of the following year.

This law was introduced at the request of a large number of commercial fishermen. A similar measure is currently in effect in Louisiana, and our fishermen believe that by requiring licenses to be purchased prior to the season a large number of vessels that previously bought licenses only during good harvest years might be excluded.

The April 30 expiration date was introduced to eliminate the need for oyster fishermen to buy two licenses for one oystering season.

The third provision of this bill, provides for a recreational shrimp license. Each recreational vessel that engages in shrimp fishing with a net having a corkline length of 30 feet or less shall pay an annual license fee of $7.50.

Also, to insure that the recreational shrimpers are not adversely affected by this legislation, the recreation shrimp license may be purchased in any month of the year.

It has been my great privilege to serve the people of Hancock, Harrison and Jackson Counties during this past legislative session and I look forward to serving you for the next three and one-half years.

If you have any questions on this or any other legislation please contact me at 467-2889.

Mississippi Leads the Way

A distinguished Mississippian, James B. Campbell of Jackson, chairs the important Education, Employment, and Training Committee of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

As chairman of that committee, Campbell, president of MISSCO Corporation headquartered in Jackson, serves as the U.S. Chamber's chief spokesman in the field of education.

In recent addresses across the nation, Campbell has focused on four conclusions resulting from the several recent national studies of the plight of education in America:

The "four conclusions" include the following:

1. Teenage and adult literacy are at dramatic levels in America.

2. The nation is facing a severe shortage of skilled workers.

3. The United States is facing unprecedented international economic competition.

4. The nation is experiencing historic demographic change.

All these, suggests Campbell, relate to the need for improving education. And the U.S. Chamber, under Campbell's leadership, has adopted an action plan for business involvement in the effort to improve education in America.

The plan calls for new business leadership in the area of education, and for a new emphasis on the role of business in the development of the nation's future workforce.

It is this new emphasis, says Campbell, that will help to ensure that the nation's future workforce is equipped with the skills and knowledge needed to compete in the global marketplace.

For more information on the U.S. Chamber's action plan, contact James B. Campbell at 467-2889.

mediate past commander of Flotilla 33; Bob Hubbard, Waveland alderman; Dick Alves, flotilla commander; Mary Alves, information systems officer; and Bob Barber, vessel examiner. In Waveland Mayor John Longo's absence from the city, Hubbard signed the proclamation for the City of Waveland. (Staff photo by Nan Patton Ehrbright)

tain; and Tracey Carver, junior and co-captain. Faculty sponsor for the group is Cathy Carter. The new Tiger cheerleaders plan to attend an Elite Cheerleading Athletics Summer Camp on Gulf Coast Junior College's Perkinson Campus in June. (Echo staff photo by Edgar Perez)

Consumer Tips

Extra Tail Lights—The National Highway Safety Administration has approved a ruling requiring a third stop lamp to be mounted in the line of sight near the rear window of all cars produced after Sept. 1, 1985.

Election Cost—It is estimated that $1.85 billion will be spent on federal, state, and local elections. This cost will include pollsters, media, printers, consultants, hotel keepers, and button makers.

New Products—Rubber bath mats with air jets to provide therapy and relaxation will appear on the market. Water will stay hot about an hour.

Electric cooktop stove counters with imbedded cast iron burners sense when the proper temperature has been reached and then adjust.

Computer analysis of energy efficiency before the house is built will predict how much energy will be used for heat and air conditioning.

Advanced security systems will identify such problems as fire, break in, and check water flow valves to prevent pipe freezing.

Car Repairs—When traveling look for signs saying a station employs certified mechanics. That means the mechanic is certified by the National Institute for Automotive Service for Excellence. Any shop meeting standards set by American Auto Association displays a sign "AAA" and offers approved auto repair.

Pet Budget—Over a ten-year period upkeep for a 40-pound dog will cost approximately $5,900 and an 80-pound dog will cost about $8,400.

Qualities Needed for Home Business—Qualifications needed for a person to be successful in a home business are: willingness to take financial risks; ability to live with decisions; patience; perseverance; lots of energy; willingness to work long, hard hours; ability to be pleasant, firm, and knowledgeable with customers and others; and the ability to organize your time, work and finances.

TV Watching—It seems that at 5:30 a.m. fewer Americans are watching TV than at any other time and that 'few' means 3.6 million households.

More advertising by 'big spenders' is being shown on late night screens. This has been encouraged by the good audience and the lower cost compared to prime time. Some studies indicate viewers remember commercials shown at 4 a.m. better than those in prime time.

Check In Airport With Credit Card—A new automated ticketing machine has been introduced at three airports including Dallas-Fort Worth. The consumer inserts a major credit card and the machine issues the ticket, assigns the seat, and gives the consumer a boarding pass.

CD's—Savers seem to prefer short-term CD's even with the deregulation and the choice of terms. One-year CD's have been particularly popular.

Mississippi Farm Bureau Federation PRIVATE PROPERTY RIGHTS

Passage of the private property rights act by the Mississippi legislature last week was a stitch-in-time to preserve a basic American right guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution, but which has unraveled embarrassingly and difficulty over the past two centuries.

The measure, though passed by both chambers of the legislature, still is faced with legislative conference action to reconcile slight variations in House and Senate versions. Then it must go to the governor's desk for his signature before becoming law.

Strangely, the issue received little attention by the news media. Yet, emphasis on passage of the measure in this session of the state legislature was the leading public affairs issue of the Mississippi Farm Bureau Federation for the current legislative session.

Mississippi's newly approved private property measure is patterned after those of sister states. When finally drafted and signed it will automatically post all privately owned property in this state against trespassing unless permission in some form is given by the legal owners of the property.

Previously the burden of posting was on landowners who were required to erect posted signs at prescribed places and intervals and publish notices of posted tracts in local newspapers.

The new act removes this burden from landowners inasmuch as all privately owned land will be posted against all forms of trespassing with violators subject to prosecution at the discretion of landowners. However, permission to trespass may be granted by landowners to whomsoever they choose, which removes property visitors from running the risk of being charged with criminal trespass. So the legislature last week cleared the air, and as far as most landowners are concerned, it was a stitch barely in time.

Private property rights, however, still face increasing pressures in the state and nation.

Close to home for Mississippians is a simmering controversy over whether or not a dry dam should be constructed in the Pearl River basin above the Barnett Reservoir so headwater areas may be flooded to lessen flooding in the Jackson vicinity. This issue contains serious inroads on private property rights if the desires of proponents of the dam prevail and if rural homes and farms are sacrificed in atonement for downstream development sins.

Many of those beating the drums the loudest for the Shoccoe dam idea think the private property rights of landowners in the headwater zone of the river basin are less consequential than a belated need to try to spare Jackson from replays of the 1979 Easter flood.

Should proponents become successful in getting the dam built, landowners in several counties northeast of Jackson would have their private property rights preempted by an eminent domain philosophy through some division of government in the interest of serving the public good. One must wonder if the public good is measured by quantity or quality.

For nearly the past decade a battle has been waged in coastal counties over private property rights versus state property rights in the tidalwater area. Private property was bought and used by taxpayers citizens there until oil leases became an issue. Then the state stepped in to assert ownership of lands according to its claims on 'mean tide' levels, and in a controversial and highly questionable issue many property owners were forced to relinquish their property rights.

Now in Florida a similar battle is underway along the shoreline of Lake Kissimmee as variations in manipulated levels of the lake give rise to ownership squabbles.

The Mississippi legislature is to be commended for patching up some tears in current private property rights. But the garment isn't mended —with mounting pressures for land and water growing more widespread.

of more than 100,000 Hungarian Jews, he was arrested in 1945 by Soviets who came to liberate Hungary and was imprisoned in the Gulag Archipelago, where some claim he lives to this day.

After contradictory statements by the Soviets in 1945 and 1948, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko finally admitted in 1957 that Wallenberg had been a prisoner in the Soviet Union but died in prison in 1947. In spite of Soviet denials, some evidence now indicates that Wallenberg is in fact "buried alive," a prisoner in the Soviet Union for the past 38 years.

Change of venue pending in Corkern murder trial

By NAN PATTON EHRBRIGHT

Attorneys have filed a motion for a change of venue for the capital murder trial of Robert Corkern, currently scheduled for July 16, but arguments on the motion will not be heard until later this spring.

Friday Circuit Judge James Thomas heard arguments on 17 other motions filed on Corkern's behalf by Yvonne Sills, appointed by the court to defend Corkern, and Nicholas Haas, appointed to assist her.

Corkern, 21, of BaySide Park, and Allen Nicolaou, 18, are charged with capital murder in the Jan. 27 shooting deaths of Gerald Comiskey and Keith McMillan at Comiskey's Waveland home.

A motion for severance has already been granted and the two men will be tried separately.

A motion to suppress a statement made by co-defendant Nicolaou and the motion for change of venue, Sills said, will require testimony by witnesses.

There is some question as to whether the trial will take place July 16.

Nicolaou was sent to Whitfield about a month ago for a mental examination, and his attorney William Frisbie said he had received no report about Nicolaou and had no idea when he might be sent back to Hancock County.

Nicolaou has not yet been arraigned, Frisbie pointed out.

"If Nicolaou doesn't testify," Sills said, "I don't think the state has a case against Corkern."

"The state's already told us they're going to ask for a continuance," Haas commented.

Thomas denied a motion to reduce the charge against Corkern, saying that was a matter to be brought up during the trial at the conclusion of the state's case.

"You're asking me to throw the capital charge out simply because you say the co-defendant is unreliable."

"If I could do that—assuming I could—why shouldn't I throw out the whole case?"

A motion to exclude consideration of the death penalty was also premature, Thomas ruled.

He also denied a motion to increase the $1,000 defense attorney fees set by statute, but he granted a motion for defense attorneys to hire an investigator to help with the defense, limiting the investigator's fee to no more than $200.

"If it exceeds that, there will have to be a specific request to the court based on specific need."

Thomas also granted a psychiatric examination by Dr. Henry Maggio to determine the competency or insanity of the defendant, with the results to be reported to the court and defense attorneys.

A defense motion for a special venire jury was granted.

But the judge denied motions to prohibit any dispersal of the 100-person jury pool until the jury is selected; to grant additional peremptory challenges by the defense; to enjoin the prosecutor from using peremptory challenges to exclude persons opposed to the death penalty; and to examine prospective jurors individually outside the presence of other prospective jurors.

A motion to control prejudicial publicity was granted insofar as it pertains to court rules governing law officials, but the judge refused to issue a gag order for the news media.

"I've about reached the conclusion that they should bring a camera in and cover everything," Thomas commented, "and the public should be required to watch."

A motion to permit Corkern to visit the scene of the killings with his attorneys was granted, as were numerous "discovery" motions asking the prosecution to provide witnesses' names and addresses and other evidentiary information.

GREATEST WAR STORY

Hailed by many critics the world over as the greatest war story ever filmed, "All Quiet on the Western Front" will be presented on "Saturday Cinema" at 9 p.m., Saturday, May 19 on Mississippi Educational Television.

Starring Lew Ayres, the 1930 film is a stirring dramatization of World War I's effects on the body and soul of a sensitive German youth.

It is 1914 when the story begins. Paul Baumer, a young and sensitive German youth, goes off to war filled with the fire and patriotism of a man who believes in the ideals of his nation. Befriended by a veteran, Paul's ideals begin to slip away as he is taught to steal food in his spare minutes, rather than read the classics, and taught, against his will, how best to bombard a peaceful village.

that he moved to other property he owns and returns to his former residence only for brief periods when work needs to be done.

Hutchinson, however, said the noise was mentioned in efforts to educate the residents close to the power line right-of-way about its effects before and during its construction, which began in June 1983 and was completed last month.

"We understood that it was an unknown, something new, and we tried to work with them to alleviate their fears," he said.

Hutchinson said claims that the line, one of several high voltage transmission lines in the state, is not a health hazard are based on past studies. However, more studies will be probably be done in the future, with specific plans for one recently announced by the Department of Energy.

Meanwhile, Mississippi Power has received no complaints about the noise or the line. Hutchinson said such complaints are often reported to local sources such as newspapers rather than the company.

Whether the controversy about the line, which carries electricity to be purchased by Gulf States Utilities in Louisiana and Texas, is over is not clear. It will bring benefits of over $1 million annually in ad valorem taxes divided among Hancock, Harrison, Pearl River and Jackson counties, according to Hutchinson.

However, its construction was fought by a number of Hancock County residents. Some of them, Hutchinson reported, refused to grant easements, causing the line to be rerouted. Hutchinson said the rerouting was minor and had no significant effect on the cost of construction.

NSTL Visitor Center open 9 to 5 everyday

The National Space Technology Laboratories' Visitors Center, with its new addition housing the Hall of Achievements, is now open seven days a week from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Early indications show that the center will be a popular attraction for the Gulf Coast and the State of Mississippi, according to Lisa Monti, facility spokesman.

Since the center was dedicated May 11, visitors from 38 states have toured the Installation.

NSTL officials report that two major tour companies have already booked 62 tours in the coming months and that pace is expected to continue as a result of the 1984 Louisiana World Exposition in nearby New Orleans. Several other tour companies have expressed interest in arranging tours of NSTL.

The Visitors Center's "Space/Oceans/Earth" theme is carried out through a series of exhibits highlighting activities of NASA and NSTL's resident federal and state agencies.

Inside the theme room is a reception area and along the "Moon Wall" is a lunar sample and a special section devoted to Mississippi astronauts Fred Haise, Dick Truly and Don Peterson. Haise's space suit from the Apollo 13 mission is among the artifacts on display.

The New multi-level Hall of Achievements takes visitors through the history of rocketry and up to NSTL's current roles in the Space Shuttle, oceanography, national defense efforts and environmental programs.

The 90-foot Space Tower has a snack bar established for the convenience of visitors who can watch video presentations and hear the countdown and sounds of rocket engine testing.

In the park area adjacent to the Visitors Center are more exhibits and a picturesque picnic area which contains plaques outlining the area's and NSTL's rich history.

Also available for visitors is an updated multi-media presentation in the auditorium and guided tours of the 13,500 acre installation. There is no admission charge and cameras are allowed.

NSTL is located in Hancock County 45 miles east of downtown New Orleans on the Mississippi Gulf Coast on Highway 607, three miles off Interstate 10 and five miles off Interstate 59.

Friendship Oak DAR honors Underwood

Darleen Underwood, extension Home Economist with offices in Bay St. Louis, has been recognized by the Friendship Oak Chapter NSDAR for an excellent contribution to our local heritage.

It all started when in 1983 Mrs. Underwood published a recipe for Fig Preserve Cake in the September issue of the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service Bulletin. At the time Mrs. John C. Elkins of Long Beach was planning a pre-organization luncheon for those interested in forming a new chapter. She felt her menu should be "typically Southern," and reasoned: "What could be more representative of our local heritage than a delicious cake made with fig preserves and pecans?"

Although the fig tree is native to the Mediterranean region, it grows chiefly in our Southern States, and Mississippi is fortunately in the "pecan belt." The dessert was an immediate success and has been repeatedly served on several occasions.

At a recent executive meeting the board felt it both fitting and proper to recognize Mrs. Underwood with an Award Certificate and through the columns of The Sea Coast Echo make available this recipe for the benefit of those who enjoy the pleasures of tasty Southern specialties.

Fig Preserve Cake

2 cups flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon soda
2 tablespoons cornstarch
1½ cups sugar
1 teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon cloves
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup cooking oil
3 eggs

1 cup buttermilk
1 cup chopped fig preserves
½ cup chopped pecans
1 tablespoon vanilla
Sauce:
1 cup sugar
½ cup buttermilk
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 tablespoon corn syrup
½ teaspoon soda
Sift together flour, salt, soda, cornstarch, sugar and spices in large bowl, add oil and beat well. Add eggs one at a time, beat well. Add buttermilk and beat. Stir in fig preserves, nuts and vanilla. Mix well.

Pour into a 9x13 inch greased pan and bake 45 minutes at 325° or until tested done. Mix all of the last five ingredients together and boil 3 to 5 minutes. Pour over warm cake.

BROADWAY HIT

Bill Irwin's Broadway hit, "The Regard of Flight," will be rebroadcast on "Great Performances" at 8 p.m., Monday, May 21 on Mississippi Educational Television.

First seen on ETV last year, Irwin's first television special was taped live at The American Place Theatre. In the show, Irwin creates a hapless "everyman" character who strives to entertain his audience but is beset with trials and distractions during the process.

At one point, in the midst of a vaudevilian dance, he realizes with horror that he is being slowly and inexorably drawn offstage. He frantically continues his routine and attempts, at the same time, to circumvent his unseen antagonist.

At another point, hounded by a hostile critic, played by Michael O'Connor, who wants to know if the performance is an example of "New Theater" or perhaps "New New Theater," Irwin is forced into a madcap search for the purity in his art.

Irwin's successful engagement at The American Place Theatre and subsequent appearance on "Saturday Night Live" have given him added exposure in recent months. Film director Robert Altman has described him as "remarkable, on the same level of genius with Keaton and Chaplin."

Broccoli has a distinguished history

By Ann O. Rushing

Broccoli has a distinguished history. This flower-like vegetable was introduced into English cultivation well over 200 years ago. Some American gardeners knew broccoli in the early 1800's.

The vegetable gained popularity in the U.S. during the past 50 years. More recently its popularity seems to be gaining even more.

Many home gardens now grow good supplies of broccoli. The succulent green buds and stems of broccoli are excellent fresh or frozen for year round enjoyment.

Fresh broccoli is available all year, but its low price period is from October through April. During these months, high quality fresh broccoli may replace the more frequently used frozen product for variety.

Fresh or frozen, broccoli is an excellent source of Vitamin A and C. It also provides fair amounts of needed minerals and B Vitamins.

The big advantage of fresh broccoli over the frozen broccoli takes less preparation time than fresh broccoli and it is usually less expensive frozen than fresh.

During the height of the broccoli season, fresh broccoli costs about the same as frozen broccoli, and flavor of the fresh product is often superior.

To compare cost of fresh or frozen broccoli, plan on three servings from a 10-ounce package or a pound of fresh broccoli. A bunch of fresh broccoli weighs around two pounds.

When selecting fresh broccoli, look for a firm, compact cluster of small flower buds with none opened enough to show the bright yellow flower. Bud clusters should be dark or sage green—an even green with a delicately purplish cast. Stems should be crisp, firm and green and should not be too thick or tough.

Avoid buying broccoli with spread bud clusters, enlarged or open buds, yellowish-green color or wilted condition—signs of overmaturity and overlong display. Also avoid broccoli with soft, slippery, water-soaked spots or bud clusters. These are signs of decay.

Broccoli is highly perishable and keeps best quality at low refrigerator temperatures and high humidity. For home storage, wrap broccoli in transparent film or place in a closed plastic bag.

It's best to use fresh broccoli within a couple of days after purchase. If you must keep it longer, open and reclose the bag after a couple of days to prevent accumulation of strong odors. Store frozen broccoli in the freezer for one year or less.

To prepare broccoli, wash it well and trim away any tough portions of the stems, but do not remove the tender stems. If any of the stems are more than an inch in diameter make four to six lengthwise gashes through them almost to the flowerets.

The stalks will then cook as quickly as the flower buds. Drop the prepared broccoli into a small amount of boiling, salted water. Cover and cook quickly 10 or 15 minutes, until just tender but still bright in color. Remove pieces carefully from water and season with salt, pepper, butter, margarine or a flavorful sauce.

Summer Reading pre-registration slated Monday at Bay Library

During the summer vacation, some children may be losing as much as four months progress in reading skills, according to recent findings.

The same study, however, concludes that children who read at least six books during the summer gain an average 2 grade equivalent. That's where public libraries can help.

This summer kids can have a bit of fun and gain in their education at the same time at the Hancock County Library System, which is sponsoring the 1984 summer reading program. Open to all school-age children, the annual reading program is coordinated by the Mississippi Library Commission.

Pre-registration for the "Let's Explore - Summer '84" reading program will be Monday, May 21 through Saturday, June 2 at each library branch. The program will begin Wednesday, June 6 at the Waveland Library, Thursday, June 7 at the Bay St. Louis Library and Friday, June 8 at the Kiln Library.

Participants will receive bookmarks, reading logs and certificates as part of the six week-long program.

For more information, call the main library at 467-5282.

HUMANE SOCIETY SUPPORT—Shirley Jones, left, Hancock Women's Club president, presents $250 check to Rosemary Malandra, president of Bay-Waveland Humane Society, at a recent club meeting at Exmouth Lodge in Waveland. The Women's Club, dedicated to financial support of humanitarian causes, raised the money through a variety of activities. The funds will go to the Humane Society's spay-neuter program, Malandra reported. (Echo staff photo by Edgar Perez)

Even the wealthy are tightening their culinary belts these days, so I've heard, with the price of imported caviar skyrocketing.

But that bothers me not at all, for I, like many another would-be gourmet, am not the least bit fond of the 'real thing,' but prefer the eggplant caviar so popular in the Middle East - 'Poor Man's Caviar' as it's called by some in various parts of our country, 'Eggplant Relish' by others.

But whatever you call it or however you make it, it's a delicious appetizer, salad or what have you. The eggplant, in all its colors (from purple to green to white) and in all its shapes (from oval to round) has been around for many centuries.

It was well established long years ago in the cuisines of early India and China by the fourth century; by the 13th century it was celebrated in the port cities of Italy, Greece and Spain, and by the 18th century it reached the New World.

Eggplant can be cooked in so many ways—baked, broiled, sautéed, stuffed with seafood or meat or cheese and so on. But I am fond of the various eggplant dips or spreads which are called eggplant spread, eggplant pate, poor man's caviar or even eggplant butter, depending upon the country and the occasion all 'round the world.

It's simple, delicious, an interesting addition to the appetizer tray as well as a tasty relish to serve with meats and poultry. So here's:

POOR MAN'S CAVIAR OR EGGPLANT RELISH

Bake a large, peeled eggplant until soft, or boil it until soft and tender. Chop the pulp rather fine, squeezing and draining off the excess liquid. Mash well.

Season to your taste with fresh ground pepper, salt, hot pepper sauce and lemon juice. Add several tablespoons or more of olive oil, depending upon the size of the eggplant and serve with crisp crackers or melba toast wedges.

And if it pleases your palate, serve with the traditional caviar trimmings—chopped chives, chopped hard-cooked egg yolk and white and sour cream. I often add whole or chopped ripe olives and chopped celery and green onion as well.

May designated Arthritis Month

May has been designated as "Arthritis Month" in Mississippi by Governor Bill Allain. Throughout the month the Mississippi Chapter of the Arthritis Foundation is conducting events to raise money and to teach people about arthritis.

"Arthritis isn't just a disease of old age, and it isn't hopeless," said Peggy Wellford of the Arthritis Foundation's Mississippi Chapter.

Arthritis affects all ages including children, and usual ly strikes adults in the prime of life during their childbearing and peak earning years.

Arthritis can last a lifetime, but with early detection and prompt treatment, it can be controlled.

For more information about arthritis and the Mississippi Arthritis Chapter activities, contact the Mississippi Chapter of the Arthritis Foundation at 8055 Ridgewood Rd., Jackson 39211, telephone 966-5371.

Methodism centennial year also marks 100 years of women's church activity

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is the fifth in a series of articles by Katrina (Mrs. C.C. Sr.) McDonald of Bay St. Louis, member of the Main Street United Methodist Church here, on the founding and development of Methodism in America in conjunction with the national celebration of the Bicentennial of Methodism in America.

By KATRINA McDONALD
Women, during this prestigious year in Methodism, are also celebrating the centennial period (1869-1893) when women's missionary societies were founded in five denominations which now comprise the United Methodist Church.

Women had played an integral part in Methodism's history from the beginning, as they taught scripture, held class meetings, raised money, and provided room and board for the circuit riders, making their rounds.

They were active in the formation of local missionary societies which educated, recruited and raised funds for these endeavors. But there was growing sentiment in the churches, where mission work, both home and foreign was high on the agenda, that there should be an organized Women's Work.

In Mississippi there is a record of a women's organization as early as 1826 in Washington and others a few years later in Natchez and Vicksburg.

However, the first official group was founded in 1869, and was called the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

In 1880, there was the Woman's Home Missionary of the same church, which was the northern branch.

On May 23, 1878, by action of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South in session in Atlanta, Ga. the Woman's Department of Missions was organized.

Bishop George F. Pierce appointed the officers and 23 women living in different sections of the south as managers.

Mrs. Juliana Hays of Baltimore, Md. was appointed president and Mrs. D. H. McGavock of Nashville, Tenn. as corresponding secretary. (More will be told of Mrs. Hays and other pioneer missionaries in the next article.)

By an act of the General Conference of Methodist Episcopal Church South of 1886, the Woman's Department of Church Extension became a separate organization known as the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society.

In the Methodist Protestant Church there were also separate home and foreign missionary societies, but in the others home and foreign societies were combined.

Home Missions programs sought to Christianize the city as well as the Native American. Missions overseas were especially effective in Asia, Europe, Africa and Latin America.

The first thing all the societies had in common was wanting to get women involved in the missionary program. There was much talk of "uniting women" and "enlisting women in the missionary cause and having more influence in planning and carrying out the missionary program of the church.

They wanted to share the gospel with "heathens" and women in "heathen" lands, although that word would be unacceptable today and was soon changed.

They were also interested in education for women. Opening a school for girls was the first thing most of the early missionaries did. Overseas they wanted to train Bible women and native Christian teachers.

India was the first country where women sent a missionary.

They had become aroused by reports from missionary couples there and were challenged to accept responsibility for the plight of Indian womanhood. The needs of women and children became a clarion call.

From being a small missionary movement, Methodism has become a worldwide church with all members sharing equally in the tasks of evangelism, education, feeding the hungry and caring for the sick.

Today's emphasis is not so much on an ever increasing number of missionaries, but on helping churches started by earlier missionaries to become self sustaining partners in mission. As part of its mission, the church maintains relationships with 367 retirement homes and long-term care facilities and 65 child care facilities.

ADULT LEARNING
Mississippi ETV's summer session for adult learning begins this year on Monday, June 4, with three courses: "Making It Count," a college credit introduction to data processing; "English Composition I," a college credit English course; and "The GED-TV Series," a course to help viewers prepare to take the General Educational Development Test.

"Making It Count" will feature four lessons each week at 7 a.m. Mondays through Thursdays, with rebroadcasts at 3:30 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays and from 1 to 3 p.m. Saturdays.

The programs in this series present a broad overview of data processing concepts and problems. Fundamentals of hardware and software, programming languages and programming logic also are covered.

Five lessons from "English Composition I" can be seen each week on ETV at 7:30 a.m. Mondays through Fridays. Rebroadcasts will be presented at 3 p.m. Mondays through Fridays.

This series provides instruction to enable a student to improve his or her writing. The course involves analyzing sentence and paragraph structure, looking up words to check spellings and meanings, limiting the subject for a paper and discriminating between appropriate and inappropriate style and tone.

"The GED-TV Series" will present four lessons each week at noon Mondays through Thursdays, with repeats from 3 to 5 p.m. Saturdays.

The series is designed to help those persons who never finished high school to brush up on English, math and reading skills covered on the General Educational Development Test.

Note: Resource material other than "A brief History of The Methodist Church" mentioned before for this and the next article also includes "A Centennial Tapestry" the program booklet of United Methodist Women, and "Methodist Women: a History," by Winnie Phillips of the Mississippi Conference.

Lichty addresses St. Monica Guild

By Joe Pilet, recording secretary
St. Monica Guild

Col. Marion Lichty, world traveler and member of St. Monica Guild of Trinity Church in Pass Christian, was speaker on Monday when the group met in the Beach Boulevard home of Mrs. John R. Frith. Col. Lichty spoke on a traveler's view of the history of religion and recommended a book entitled "The History of Man" written by Huston Smith for additional study.

In Burma, Col. Lichty said, the women have more freedom than those of many Asian countries, however, world-wide religious leaders are predominantly men. She said: "Even here in the United States today we have a few women who serve as ministers or priests," and named one exception. "Mary Baker Eddy was founder of Christian Science and the Church of Christ," Col. Lichty explained.

"The history of religion is truly the history of mankind," she added and said from earliest accounts man has always felt the need to worship the unknown and to feel that some higher power guides his life. She spoke of the architectural wonders of various shrines, tabernacles, and referred to Confucianism a philosophy rather than a religion.

Prior to the program, the guild voted unanimously to give $25 to the St. Mary's School for Indian Girls to be used for sewing needs; and $500 to the St. Michael's Boys Farm in Picayune for use at the discretion of the director.

Hostesses at the refreshment center included in addition to Mrs. Frith, Mmes. W.A. Martin and Nunez C. Pilet.

The guild will discontinue monthly meetings during the summer months and begin the 1984-85 schedule on a regular basis beginning in September.

OSCAR WINNER

Oscar-winning Ben Kingsley recreates his Broadway role in "Ben Kingsley as Edmund Kean," to be presented at 9 p.m., Monday, May 21 on Mississippi Educational Television.

The 60-minute one-character show, written by Raymond FitzSimons, dramatizes the life of the 19th century actor Edmund Kean as a drunkard and a womanizer, a tormented genius who personally and professionally exhausted himself by the time he was 30.

Yet in his prime, Kean was considered a matchless interpreter of Shakespeare and the first truly great romantic actor of the Georgian theatre in the 18th century.

The play is set in the dying actor's dressing room as he paints a verbal and visual portrait of himself of his imaginary audience.

Samuel Taylor Coleridge once said that to see Kean act was like "reading Shakespeare by flashes of lightning." William Hazlitt declared that "he bore on his brow the mark of a fire from Heaven."

The television presentation of "Ben Kingsley as Edmund Kean" is directed by Kingsley's wife, Alison Sutcliffe.

STATE ALUMS TOUR NSTL—NSTL recently hosted some 23 Mississippi State University administrators and key alumni to familiarize the alumni with MSU's activities at the installation. James Wolfe, director of NSTL's MSU Research Center, said, "Many people do not know the full extent of our activities at NSTL and the studies we do in the coastal zone of the state." Welcoming remarks were made by university president James McCombs and alumni affairs director Charles Weatherly. Wolfe briefed the group of State supporters on the research center and its activities at NSTL as well as its goals and future plans. Roy Estess, NSTL's deputy director, led the group on a brief tour of the new Visitors Center addition and the Space Shuttle Test Complex. Alumni in attendance included Leo Seal and C.C. McDonald, both of Bay St. Louis; Steve Hill, Mercer Miller, Alan Barton, and Pete Ball, all of Gulfport; Estess; Glade Woods of NSTL; Martha Gill; Tommy Delashment of Moss Point; Buddy Broadway of Playune; Durward Dunn and Jimmy Loggans, both of New Orleans; and Wolfe. Administrators from the university included McCombs, Gerry Gilmer, director of university relations; Marion Loftin, vice president for graduate studies; Robert Wolberton, vice president for academic affairs; Jim Hemphill, assistant director of university development; George Verrall, vice president for business affairs; Dr. Ray Bishop; and Weatherly.

A FRAME OF REFERENCE

Picking a good frame is like buying artwork. You must look for indications of quality before you put your money down. Learning the difference between quality framing and poor framing is easy and will save you both time and money in the long run.

The most important commodity a frame shop sells is its expert service. Whereas some frame shops hire high school students at minimum wage as their experts, other shops employ professional framers trained in the craft.

The difference in framers is very important because framer error, caused by inexperience or negligence, can cause hundreds of dollars worth of damage.

There are two ways to find out if a frame shop offers expert service: examine the quality of the framed artwork on display, and ask the framers educated questions. Price is usually not an indication of quality; the most expensive frame shop in town may offer the worst service.

Since there is such a variation in service quality, you must know the best framing procedure for your artwork. Listed below are the different types of services offered by frame shops and some advantages and disadvantages of each.

Museum Mounting
The most abused framing procedure is museum or conservation mounting. Used on original artwork and signed limited edition prints, museum mounting, when properly done, prevents deterioration of artwork. Any other procedure will lessen or destroy the art's value.

Almost every frame shop will say that it does museum mounting, but many frame shops do not use the correct procedure. Museum mounting should be completely reversible and it should not alter the artwork in any way. Any alteration in the artwork will cause an alteration in its value.

The framer then adds the glass and the frame, the latter of which should not be too snug, so that the artwork has room to breathe.

Some framers attempt to shortcut the museum mounting procedure by placing a thin sheet of barrier paper between the artwork and a piece of cardboard instead of using a ragboard backing.

"Barrier" paper is 100% acid-free, but cardboard is not. A rip in the barrier paper or a slip of the artwork could put the artwork and cardboard in contact with each other. Prolonged contact could cause deterioration of the artwork.

Substituting conservation board for ragboard is another shortcut, which is not recommended by professional framers because conservation board is composed of man-made fibers instead of natural fibers.

Conservation board is also 100% acid-free and cheaper than ragboard.

Glass, mat board and tape should never touch original artwork and limited edition prints.

Over time these materials can cause foxing, a yellowing or molding process which will damage the artwork.

In most old photographs with foxing, the photos have been taped to a backing and the tape has grown brittle and discolored the photograph.

The discoloration will eventually seep across the photograph and destroy it. Any evidence of foxing on original artwork and limited edition prints will lessen their value.

Because properly framed original artwork is not attached to any surface, it may wave over time. Waves are characteristic of paper artwork. A framer who suggests tacking, taping or dry mounting original artwork to prevent natural waves should be avoided.

Always examine framed artwork purchased directly from the artist. Most artists do not use museum mounting techniques, but instead tape the work to a cardboard backing. Frame shops, on the other hand, will museum mount the artwork and then place it back in the same frame.

Dry Mounting

There are two recommended methods of dry mounting. The first, cold mounting, is a hand-done process. The framer uses positionable mounting paper as an adhesive, places the photograph on top of it and burrishes out the wrinkles.

Cold mounting should be used on delicate items, such as Cibachrome prints and brass rubbings.

The second process, hot mounting, requires the use of a heat press. The framer places a heat-activated adhesive on the backing board, places the poster on top of the adhesive, tacks it in place with a hot iron and then places it into the heat press.

Too much heat from the press can ruin a poster or photograph. Some color photographs, Cibachrome prints and brass rubbings can melt in a heat press.

Most framers use hot mounting to iron out wrinkles in a poster, a procedure which distinguishes the inexperienced framer from the experienced one. The inexperienced framer will often increase the wrinkles by failing to smooth them out before placing the poster in the heat press.

On the other hand an experienced framer will use the hot iron to straighten and tack the wrinkles before placing the poster in the heat press.

To avoid the use of a heat press, some frame shops use a procedure called wet mounting. When wet mounting, the framer sprays the backing board with an adhesive and then places the print on top of it.

Although wet mounting sounds easy, the procedure can damage artwork. If the framer puts the poster on crookedly, the poster cannot be removed and straightened. This procedure also makes the removal of wrinkles difficult.

Wet mounting has other drawbacks, too. The framer must cover the entire backing board with the adhesive. If he misses a spot and places the poster on the adhesive, the poster will bubble over the bare area. Bubbles like wrinkles can't be removed.

A thin poster should never be wet mounted. The adhesive may seep through the paper, discoloring the poster. Wet mounting adhesive also contains many untested additives that could damage the poster over time.

Further Consideration

A different procedure is used to frame needlework. The framer stretches the needlework across Fome-cor, a 98 percent acid-free backing.

The stretching process stretches the needlework to attach the needlework to the backing, the framer will staple or sew it. Either method is acceptable, although stapling is much harder to reverse.

Needlework should never be covered with glass because condensation can form between the glass and the fabric. Eventually the condensation will cause the fabric to mold.

Frame shops are well-known for selling expensive items to their customers. Shops have been known to push non-glare glass, which is more expensive than regular glass. Non-glare glass is regular glass immersed in an acid that tends to distort the image of a picture. In fact, most museums do not use non-glare glass.

Some customers have reported another problem with non-glare glass. Occasionally, the acid is not completely wiped off the glass. The remaining acid spots, called hot spots, have been known to eat through the print that they're touching. When buying non-glare glass, the customer should make sure it does not touch the print.

Framed artwork on display often indicates the quality of a frame shop. Bubbled photographs and dry mounted originals should send clear signals indicating bad framing.

But there are other, more subtle hints as well. Crooked mats, mats without a beveled edge, or mats with severe overcuts indicate sloppiness. Poorly assembled frames give the same impression.

Examine the framed artwork first, then ask your questions. If the artwork looks nice and your questions are answered properly, leave your order with the frame shop.

Taking a few minutes to assure yourself of a frame shop's quality will save you both time and money in the long run. It will also ensure the value of your artwork.
